She made some evasive reply and the sailor took no further notice of it. Now on the night of the 4th of June the woman went out to the house of the other man at about o'clock, and as a matter of fact I may say that she did not return until this tragedy had taken place. There were left in the third room the little girl, the prisoner, and the brother. I think that you will find that what took place during that night was something to this effect. The accessed and the little girl went to sleep in the room and the brother went out in the street to sleep it being a warm night. About 12.30 some woman who was living in the second room with a child came out and asked the sailor to get her some tea. he was dosing off when the prisoner came in to the room and said that he wanted to go to the latrine but had not any money to pay for it. The sailor's jacket was hanging up in the passage and he told him to take out a cash which was in the pocket. The prisoner did so and went away and the sailor finding that it was too warm in the house went outside again. Somewhere about 3 o'clock the accused returned from the latrine and said he was hungry and wanted 5 cents to buy some food. The brother told him that he could not give him five cents but that he had bett r boil some rice. TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." SIE,-As we have an Observatory and have to pay for it, most will agree that we may as well get all we can out of it. To this end I will ask for space to suggest to the proper authorities that the "China Coast Meteorological Register" be posted regularly at the Peak Tram Station, as it is now at the Telegraph Company's Office and Pedder's Wharf. It would there be very convenient for the Peak residents, who now form a large proportion of the European inhabitants of the Colony. Doubtless the little extra work entailed would be welcomed by the Observatory staff as means of popularizing their department and the Tramway Company would be equally ready to do the public a service by granting the necessary wall space. - Yours faith fully.

against, won a fine race by half a length.

It is a principle too well established now to be questioned, that Government has a right by egislation to protect its people, and its labourng classes especially, from competition, whether it comes in the form of a man or in the form of the product of human industry, if it touds to degrade and lower American labour and force it down in the plane of civilization. The great boast of our land has been that labour is better remunerated here than anywhere else; that the man who toils is guaranteed a fair return for his day's lubour, measured not by his naked wants, but by the part he is expected to play in ne development of this country, the maintenance of its civilization, and the perpetuation of these United States.

Some will condemn all restrictive laws because; from the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man standpoint, all men being equal, all man should be permitted the same degree of freedom of movement and liberty in the practice of their trades and callings, and in the enjoyment of whatever fruits may come to them from their own industry; and all laws that interfere with the individual man, restricting his opportunities, or denying him the right to enjoy life and liberty in any country, should be condemned by humanitarians and Christians. But this beautiful sentiment finds no application in the exercise of Governmental powers, because all such recognize that their first duty is to their own citizens; and in the desire of securing to them protection, and the enjoyment of life and liberty and happiness, the consideration of the effect on other people is of little consequence. The doctrine of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man does not apply in California, having been expressly repudiated in the gubernatorial election in this State, in 1867, when it was in issue.

If this clamour against Chinese exclusion that comes up from the East, and from New England where they can obtain better remuneration and the same standard that they have justified and approved of during the past twenty or thirty years, which while not excluding the labour of the world from coming to this land, yet excluded the products of that labour, and by limiting it in the demand for the results of their toil and labour reduced its income and denied to it the right to enjoy the fruits and full measure of its powers and capabilities?

When one reads the present declarations of these wise men of the East, and thinks of the procedile tears they now shed over the fact that the poor Chinaman is denied ingress to this "land of the free and home of the brave," one remembers the beautiful stories we were regaled with last year by protection orators and writers from the same portion of the Union, who found a pleasure in presenting to the American people the pictures of misery and suffering that pretreated likewige. The Chinese differ as competitors from all other people with whom we have been brought into competition. The population of their country amounts to over four hundred millions of people. Nearly all of these are labourers, and the condition of the country sustains the statement that the bulk of them are ready to emigrate to such countries as will afford better opportunities for employment. In China we find an unlimited abundance of cheap labour, and how cheap! Mr. Bedlee, Consul at Amoy, in his report for January, 1892, gives an interesting table of the earnings, cost of living, and mode of life of the Chinese people. In that report, he puts the average earning of the Chinese adult employed as mechanic or labourer at five dollars per mouth, and states that this is ten per cent. above the average wages prevailing throughout China. The wages paid according to bis report, per month, to blacksmiths are 87.25; carpenters, 8.50; cabinet makers, $9.00; glass-blowers, $9.00, plasterers, $6.25; plumbers, $6.25; machinists; $6.00; other classes of skilled labour are paid from $1.25 to $9.00 per month, while common labourers receive $4.00 per month. In European houses, the aversua wages paid to servants are from $5.00 to $6.00 a month, without board. Clothing costs per

The Chinese labourer brings here neither wife nor children, and his wants are limited to the immediate necessities of the individual, while the American is compelled to earn income sufficient to maintain the wife and babies. There can be but one end to this. If this immigration is permitted to continue, American labour must surely be reduced to the level of the Chinese competitor—the American's wants measured by his wants, the American's comforts no greater than the comforts of the Chinamen; and the American labourer, a t baving been been introduced solely with reference to the the affect of the denotation and the affect of the denotation of the denota To DARKEN GREE HAIR.-Lockyer's Sul- educated to maintain himself according to this the effect of the depreciation of the appropriation of the appropriation

It matters not what our expectations, however great, were at that time; they have not been realized. The inducements held out to our people by that treaty never have been justified by the action of the Chinesa. We had a right to expect that the nation that had refused to be their enemy, when the great nations attacked them, should hold a better place in their estimation than their adversaries, but the experience of the last twentyfive years, since the Burlingame Treaties were ratified, shows that in the matter of trade, the Chinaman permits no sentiment to influence or affect him, but buys where he can buy the cheapest, whether from his enemy or friend. and salls in the market that will take at the highest price the greatest amount of his commodities.
